

COURSE OUTLINE
FNPL-210
Financial Planning Seminar
1 Semester Hour

HOWARD COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Description

This course is designed to be a project-oriented, capstone course for the financial planning curriculum. It will combine all major program concepts into an individualized application, such as: preparation of a comprehensive financial plan; a workplace internship; deeper exploration of one aspect of personal financial planning; or other similar items. A written and oral report will serve as the project outcome. Prerequisites: BMGT-205 and FNPL-206 (1 hour weekly)

Overall Course Objectives

Upon completion of this course the student will be able to:

1. Demonstrate ability to apply basic financial planning concepts.
2. Design a usable, logical application of those concepts, through the choice of a final project.
3. Present the results of their project in both written and oral form.
4. Develop a stepping stone to the next phase of their financial career or personal financial decision making

Major Topics

- I. Review of major financial planning concepts
- II. Project selection
- III. Project design
- IV. Project presentation

Course Requirements

Course grades will be determined by faculty and will include tests, projects, and presentations
