Donor Report

As I conclude my third and final year as Chair of the Board for the Howard Community College Educational Foundation, I do so with tremendous gratitude for the generosity, partnerships, and shared commitment that continue to strengthen Howard Community College and support our students.

This year, the Foundation raised more than $3.9 million to support scholarships, student success programs, workforce development initiatives, and key institutional priorities. In addition, nearly $3 million in competitive grant funding was secured to expand opportunities and resources that directly benefit our students and community.

What continues to inspire me most is the unwavering commitment of our donors, community partners, faculty, staff, and Foundation leadership. Philanthropy plays a vital role in removing barriers and creating opportunities for students through scholarships, emergency assistance, pantry support, workforce training, and innovation programming.

We also saw continued growth in transformational giving and strategic partnerships. Endowed funds increased by more than $2 million, strengthening the Foundation's long-term sustainability and ensuring future generations of students will benefit from donor generosity.

A significant example of this impact is the continued investment of Thomas P. Clement and Wonsook Kim in engineering and innovation at HCC. Their support has helped expand the Thomas P. Clement Creativity, Ideation, and Innovation Workshops, now entering its third cohort. The program provides engineering students with hands-on experiences in innovation, collaboration, and problem-solving while inspiring projects with potential patent opportunities.

This year also marks an important leadership transition as Anne Johnson retires as Executive Director. Anne's leadership, community relationships, and dedication to HCC have strengthened the Foundation and positioned it for continued growth. I am grateful for her partnership and service.

Serving as Chair of the Howard Community College Educational Foundation has been a tremendous honor. Thank you to every donor, volunteer, sponsor, and community partner whose generosity continues to change students' lives every day.

With sincere appreciation,
Alison Canning
Chairperson, Board of Directors
Howard Community College Educational Foundation

NAMING OPPORTUNITIES

Creating a Lasting Legacy

At Howard Community College, naming opportunities allow donors to create a lasting impact while supporting students, programs, and learning experiences across the college. Because HCC facilities are funded through state and county capital dollars, contributions made through the Howard Community College Educational Foundation directly support scholarships, academic programs, workforce development, and student success initiatives in accordance with donor intent.

Naming a Space

This year, a transformational gift from the T&W Foundation expanded innovation-based learning opportunities for students pursuing engineering, technology, and applied sciences. In recognition of this support, Howard Hall was renamed T&W Foundation Hall.

We will also be celebrating in the fall the opening of the Cathy and Danny Bell Trades Center, providing expanded opportunities for students pursuing careers in manufacturing, welding, automotive technology, HVAC, plumbing, electrical, and related skilled trades.

Additional naming opportunity supporters included Andrew and Kathryn Bulleri, Dr. Pascal Crosley, Al and Mary Ellen Hunt, and the Jonathan Johnson Community Coalition.

Joining Behind a Cause

The Foundation introduced the Service Wall in honor of Delegate Frank S. Turner, recognizing organizations whose collective support reflects a shared commitment to service, leadership, and educational opportunity. We are especially grateful to the Turner family and Omega Psi Phi Fraternity – Tau Pi Chapter for championing this vision and helping to bring it to life.

Honoring Someone Who Made a Difference

This year, donors established the Anne B. Johnson Arena in the Kahlert Foundation Complex in recognition of Anne Johnson's service and commitment to Howard Community College and its students.

The Arena naming was made possible through the generosity of individuals, families, foundations, and businesses across the community, reflecting the many partnerships built through years of service to the College.

We are grateful to all donors who invested in naming and recognition opportunities during fiscal year 2026, helping create opportunities for students while building a lasting legacy for future generations.

GENERATIONS OF HOPE

■ How One Flyer Changed a Family's Destiny

How donor support at HCC is helping Esther and Kehinde build a legacy of success for their five children.

When Esther and Kehinde moved their family of seven to Columbia, Maryland, in 2020, they carried a deep desire to build a better life. Both worked as Certified Nursing Assistants (CNAs) and hoped to advance their careers, but with five children, the financial and logistical barriers to higher education felt overwhelming.

Esther explored options for continuing her education out of state, but the numbers simply did not work. Between tuition, childcare, and living expenses, higher education felt out of reach.

"I couldn't see financing school while taking care of children," she recalls. "I worried about the cost and the distance."

Then came a moment that changed everything. While walking into her child's Head Start facility, Esther noticed a flyer for Howard Community College's Parent Scholars Program. She made the call and in doing so, changed the trajectory of her entire family.

■ A Team Effort in the Classroom and at Home

Enrolling at HCC was seamless, and Esther's decision quickly inspired her husband. Seeing her take the first step gave him the confidence to pursue his own academic path. Together, they entered the pre-nursing track while continuing to support their growing family.

"My husband sees me as someone who can inspire him," Esther says. "We make a good team to help each other out."

Balancing coursework and family life required sacrifice. Kehinde adjusted his work schedule to weekends so both could stay on track academically.

"The biggest challenge is taking time from the children to study," he says. "We have to sacrifice because we know what we want."

Throughout their journey, HCC provided critical support through online learning, tutoring, lab access, and a campus food pantry that helped ease daily pressures.

"The professors and staff want you to succeed," Esther says. "They teach with so much passion."

■ The Power of Philanthropy: Creating "Brain Space"

While HCC provided academic support, donor generosity made persistence possible. Through the Parent Scholars Program and scholarships including the Kahlert Foundation Parent Scholars Scholarship, Beverly White-Seals Scholarship, and the McCuan Family Foundation Endowment, Esther and Kehinde were able to focus more fully on their studies.

"All the scholarships I received helped me worry less," Esther says. "When this is taken care of, I have more brain space to study, which helps me increase my grades."

The McCuan Family Foundation's endowed support ensures ongoing assistance for students, while the Kahlert Foundation, through Greg Kahlert's leadership and investment in parenting students, continues to expand access to opportunity across HCC.

Without this support, Esther is clear about the outcome.

"I don't think I would have continued," she says. "It would not have been possible."

■ A Culture of Learning That Extends Beyond the Classroom

The impact of their education extends into their household. Learning has become central to family life.

"When school is in session, it's everything I talk about," Esther says. "We celebrate exams and talk about what we're learning."

Their children are responding in kind. Their daughter now seeks extra help in math, and their eldest son is thriving in HCC's Dual Enrollment Program.

■ Looking to a Brighter Tomorrow

With a two-year degree, Esther and Kehinde will soon graduate and enter the workforce as registered nurses, quickly improving their family's economic mobility. But Esther's dreams don't stop there; she plans to attend Stevenson University in the future to pursue a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) and ultimately earn a Master of Science in Nursing (MSN).

Their goal is simple but powerful: to build long-term stability and one day purchase a home for their five children.

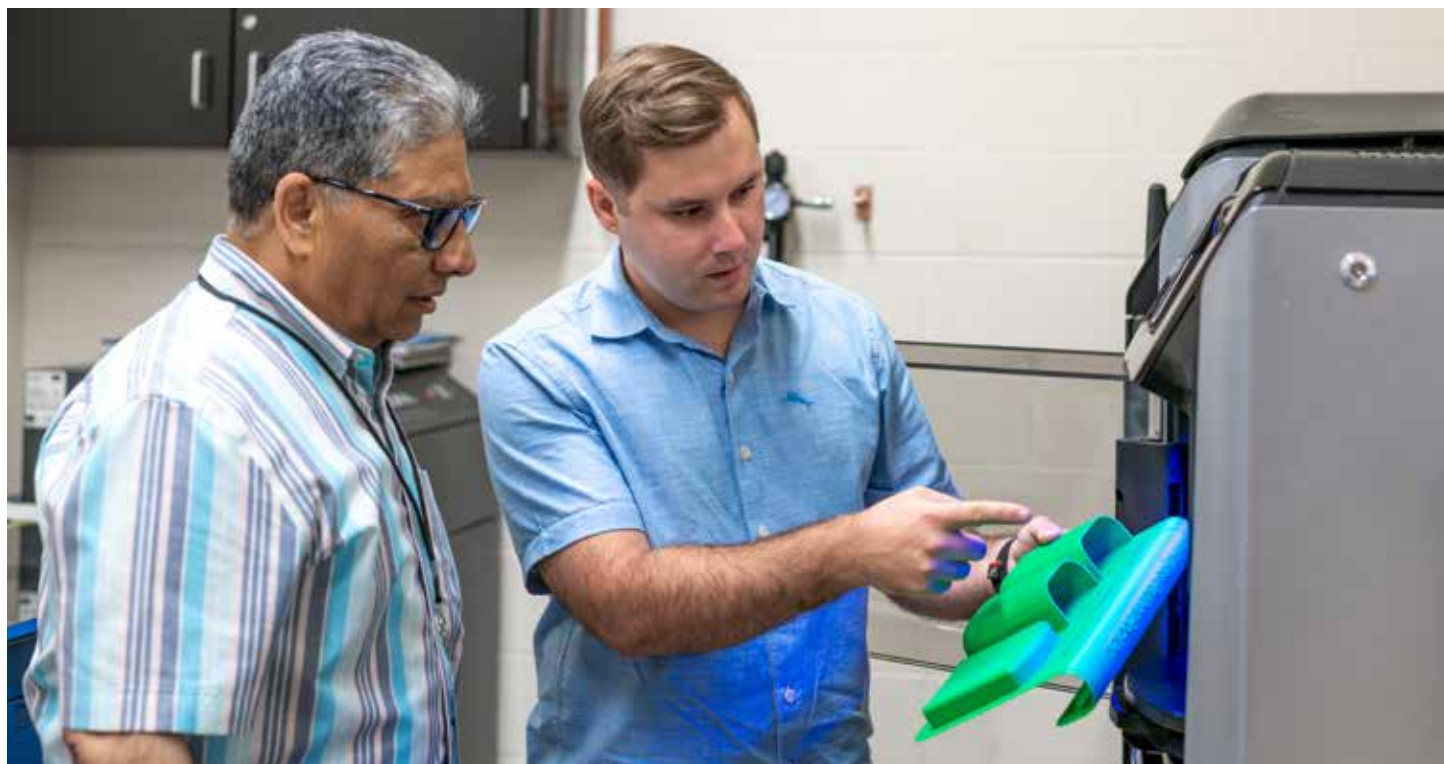

"A very big thank you to the donors," Esther says. "Because of your support, my children can see what is possible. This opportunity is changing our family's future for generations to come."

"When you support a parent, you change the trajectory of an entire family. That's why The Kahlert Foundation is proud to support HCC's Parent Scholars Program and help student-parents like Esther and Kehinde build a stronger future for the next generation."

— Greg Kahlert, President,
The Kahlert Foundation

FROM IDEA TO PATENT: THOMAS CLEMENT'S INVESTMENT IN STUDENT INNOVATION

When entrepreneur, inventor, and philanthropist Thomas P. Clement first visited Howard Community College, he saw untapped potential.

A community college graduate himself, Clement understands the power of opportunity. Through the T&W Foundation, he and his wife, Wonsook Kim, are now investing in the next generation of innovators at HCC.

Last year, the T&W Foundation made a transformational $1 million gift to establish the Thomas P. Clement Center for Engineering Innovation and renamed Howard Hall as T&W Foundation Hall. Building on the success of the initiative, the Foundation has increased its commitment to $1.425 million over five years.

At the heart of the Center is the Thomas P. Clement Creativity, Ideation, and Innovation Workshop, co-led by Clement and Dr. Gazan Bozai, Professor and Department Head of Engineering. The immersive program helps students transform ideas into inventions through hands-on learning, mentorship, and prototyping.

More than fifty students have participated in the workshops, gaining not only technical skills, but the confidence to see themselves as innovators.

One of those students, Troy Murray, recently received his first U.S. patent less than nine months after participating in the program. He is now pursuing a second patent-pending innovation inspired by everyday challenges he identified through the creative problem-solving process taught at HCC.

Beyond financial support, Clement personally mentors students and, through the T&W Foundation, covers patent-related legal fees to remove barriers for young inventors.

“Our motto is simple,” Clement says. “We remove obstacles.”

Through the Thomas P. Clement Center for Engineering Innovation, students are discovering that their ideas have value, and that innovation can begin at a community college.
